

Artificial Intelligence: What is it, how does it affect media, and where
will it go?

Dr Rob Nicholls, University of Sydney

Tuesday October 1, 2024, 6.15 for 6.30 pm start

Armidale Playhouse, 309 Beardy Street

(drinks available; free, no ticket needed, just turn up)

Artificial Intelligence is everywhere. Come along and join in a discussion of its impact in the media, led by a leading authority on its past, present and future.

Dr Rob Nicholls is a senior research associate at the University of Sydney. His first degree was in electronics and communications engineering. Rob was Australia's Independent Telecommunications Adjudicator, 2012 to 2020. His research is at the heart of AI issues, focusing on the intersection of technology and regulation. He advises senior executives of regulators and governments in Australia and overseas.