IIPW STORY

Established in 1986 by President Ronald Reagan, International Infection Prevention Week (IIPW) focuses attention on the importance of infection prevention in saving lives and healthcare dollars. APIC has spearheaded this annual effort to highlight the significance of infection prevention among healthcare professionals, administrators, legislators, and consumers.

GLOBAL MISSION

Over the years, this week of recognition has vastly expanded to every corner of the globe, including Australia, the United Kingdom, the Middle East, and Southeast Asia. As the reach of IIPW widens, more patients benefit from safer healthcare practices and reduced threat of healthcare-associated infections.

MISSION 2023

This year’s theme is “Celebrate the Fundamentals of Infection Prevention”. We want to highlight the important science behind infection prevention and inspire the next generation of IPs to join the fight. How can YOU prioritize infection prevention in your day-to-day life?
