

Gabriel Scodeller
President of East Bay Young Republicans

Born and raised in Pleasant Hill, California, it was after graduating from San Diego State University and returning home that I felt empowered to encourage young people of similar minds to embrace their political identity. With a background in political science and hands on experience in local politics, I have seen firsthand how change truly begins at the community level.

I believe it starts locally, quieting the national narrative to focus on what is immediately important. For far too long, young people have been Democrat by default, hesitant to challenge the status quo out of fear of being ostracized or cast aside. Meanwhile, unquestioned policies continue to threaten the places we live.

Supremacy of thought and political power is no way to run our cities, nor our country. That is precisely what the Young Republicans are. We are intent on restoring conversation and debate when necessary to voice our opposition.

What is Young Republicans (YR)?

the Young Republicans (often called YR) is a nationwide conservative youth organization affiliated with the Republican Party. It's designed for high school, college, and young professionals (typically ages 18–40) who want to:

- get involved in campaigns and local politics
- build leadership and organizing skills
- network with elected officials and professionals
- promote conservative policy ideas at the grassroots level

Local chapters (like in the Bay Area or East Bay) operate independently but follow the broader national structure, focusing on voter outreach, events, debates, and community engagement.
