

COLORADANS FOR THE COMMON GOOD

Making Democracy Work

We are a broad-based network that strengthens local leadership, builds trust across divides, and equips ordinary people to take collective action on issues impacting their communities. We do this through promoting deep relationships, institutional collaboration, and strategic public engagement.

Protecting Tipped Workers from Wage Cuts

Earning recognition from The New Yorker, CCG worked with workers, unions, and local businesses to stop every version of a dangerous bill that would have forced cities to slash wages for tipped workers, or stripped towns of the right to set fair, local minimum wages.

Prioritizing Public Investment in Shared Prosperity

Amid rising displacement, pollution, and city-backed tourist projects, CCG and member institution GES* held a seminar and launched a community education campaign with 100+ residents and local experts to advance public investments that prioritize community needs over private interests.

Building Relationships Across Differences

At its 4th Annual Labor Seder, CCG united a record 343 people from diverse faith communities, unions, and nonprofits to deepen relationships and reclaim an ancient story of liberation in honor of today's workers.

Developing Everyday People into Powerful Leaders

For over five years, CCG has trained hundreds of leaders in local institutions on the habits, practices, and concepts of organizing - building both CCG's organizing and the capacity of local institutions to pursue their mission. CCG is expanding its leadership base by organizing four 2-day trainings with over 100 community members in Adams and Boulder Counties.

INVEST IN THE COMMON GOOD

Coloradans for the Common Good is building a diverse, powerful organization that equips everyday people to lead, act, and shape the decisions that impact their families and communities. Your support helps us expand this work across Colorado's Front Range—developing leaders, strengthening democracy, and advancing the common good.
