

In Every Season

God's wisdom is woven through all Creation
As the seasons shift in integration
Swell of the ocean, the dance of trees
Each season sings Christ's melodies.

Wisdom ignored— she now cries tears
Have we lost our way, overshot our years?
This great destruction of our aching moment
Seasons crumbling, is our home broken?

God's call for all is to love and tend
What we break, we must also mend.
You feel the fear; a weight like gravity
This is normal, when you face reality.
It's tempting to hide from problems full-grown
But this is Holy Work, and you're not alone.

In every season, of your numbered days
You're invited in, through lament and praise
We speak and act for God's common grace
We plant tomorrow's seeds, today.

'In Every Season' poem was commissioned by Common Grace as part of Season of Creation 2025 and written by Will Small, founder of Lead by Story.

Visit www.commongrace.org.au/give to watch the video.

