Celebrating the Revolutionary Power of Women

#balanceforbetter

Collective action and shared responsibility for driving a gender-balanced world is key. International Women's Day is a global day celebrating the social, economic, cultural and political achievements of women - while also marking a call to action for accelerating gender balance.

The first International Women's Day occurred in 1911, supported by over one million people. Today, IWD belongs to all groups collectively everywhere. IWD is not country, group or organization specific.

Gloria Steinem, world-renowned feminist, journalist and activist once explained "The story of women's struggle for equality belongs to no single feminist nor to any one organization but to the collective efforts of all who care about human rights."

Studies have also shown that:

- Women's earnings decrease with age while men's continue increasing.
- Women with children are penalized professionally while men are rewarded.
- Women who negotiate are more likely than men who negotiate to receive feedback that they are "intimidating," "too aggressive," or "bossy."
- Men ask for promotions and raises less often than women but receive them more often.

Rape Culture

1 in 5 American women will have been subjected to rape during their lifetime.

1 out of every 10 rape victims are male.

Rape Culture

Rape culture:

- conditions those who live within it to see women as sexual objects, not fully human;
- encourages restricted and often violent norms of masculinity;
- confines our understanding of gender and sexual identities to false categories;
- treats sexual violence as distinct from other forms of violence in that the victims carry suspicion, blame, and responsibility.

In short, rape culture limits and hurts nearly everyone.

Step 1: Constitutional Equality

- 85% of the world's countries have language in their governing documents that prohibit sex discrimination. The United States is not one of them.
