Executive Directors, IMF

Dear Sir/Madam,

We, the undersigned economic justice, human rights, environmental and climate justice, and feminist civil society organisations, write to follow up on our joint 2024 letter, and to welcome the Fund's decision to review the Guidelines on Engagement with Civil Society.

First, we would like to underscore the welcomed efforts by the colleagues at the IMF communications department, especially the Civil Society Lead, to better engage and consult with civil society organisations on IMF processes and reviews. We have indeed witnessed significant improvements as a result, including the publication of the phases included in some ongoing policy reviews with relevant points of contact, and language translation of consultation materials and CSO events. However, significant gaps remain and we believe Fund management can do more to empower staff to engage meaningfully with civil society, and that a Board-approved policy would significantly strengthen accountability and consistency.

This review is taking place alongside the Program Design and Conditionality, Comprehensive Surveillance, and Low-Income Country Debt Sustainability Framework reviews - processes of profound importance to civil society and the communities affected by IMF policies, given the Fund's decades-long promotion of fiscal consolidation and structural reforms with significant social and distributional consequences. Hence, active consultation with a wide range of non-state actors such as CSOs, trade unions and community groups is essential to improving programme design and surveillance as they can provide insight into how adjustment burdens fall across society and how reforms can be sequenced and designed to be socially balanced, politically feasible, and more sustainable over time.

Yet consultation practices across these reviews continue to fall short of the Guidelines. Information on timelines, terms of reference, background documentation, and how civil society input will inform outcomes has often been limited or absent. So far, they have largely consisted of online surveys with overly simplistic and multiple-choice questions that did not allow for tailored, nuanced feedback on key substantive areas. Where there were opportunities to provide open responses, those inputs were not meaningfully synthesised or clearly reflected in the presentation of findings, leaving many participants uncertain how their feedback was used, if at all. Moreover, despite the Conditionality Review appearing on the 2025 Executive Board Workplan, no public consultation timeline, terms of reference, or publication of submissions has been made available to date. These shortcomings reflect broader, long-standing patterns in the Fund's engagement with civil society, where a lack of clear information on policy processes and unclear guidelines on how CSO input will shape outcomes remain the norm.

Moreover, evidence from country experiences documented by Oxfam, shows that engagement during missions is often ad hoc, overly technical, and takes place after key positions have already been formed, further highlighting that inconsistent implementation trickles down to country missions as well. Consultations frequently occur late, involve a narrow set of actors, and in some cases prioritise private sector interests under the banner of CSO engagement further limiting influence and reinforcing power imbalances.

We therefore urge the Fund, as part of this review, to move beyond reiterating principles and instead ensure the full and consistent implementation of the Guidelines, alongside concrete measures that close feedback loops and enable meaningful, accountable engagement in practice.

On policy process we call for:

- Mandatory systematic inclusion of CSO perspectives in Article IV reports and in reviews of policy and strategy papers to ensure the feedback loop is closed and engagement is consistent with a clear paper trail;
- Publication of clear consultation timelines, terms of reference, and staff points of contact for all policy consultations.
- Allowing parallel CSO submissions that are not restricted to the official survey where consultation questions remain narrow or technocratic, so organisations can provide input beyond predefined questions and ensure important issues are not excluded.

On in-country engagement we call for:

- Mandatory structured outreach to diverse CSOs 6-8 weeks before missions, supported by published stakeholder mappings and mission team contact details, agendas and supported documentation;
- Development of a simple CSO feedback tracker for each mission to record commitments made and follow up on how inputs were addressed;
- Planning of annual regional CSO dialogues clearly linked to IMF work cycles.

These steps would help ensure that engagement with civil society is in line with both the spirit and the letter of the Guidelines. Moreover, we believe it is time for the Fund to have a Board approved policy on engagement with civil society organisations rather than just the Guidelines that are by nature optional.

We look forward to continued dialogue on how the Fund can make this review an opportunity to strengthen engagement in practice.

Sincerely,
