Caring for the Land that Takes Care of Us

How do we take care of one another and the land that takes care of us? In 2017, faith communities in our networks made good use of our diverse programs to this end.

In the winter, we heard stories of regeneration and strategized about how to renew the houses of worship that we have erected upon this land so that they can better serve the communities they are a part of. Together, we forayed into the world of extreme weather preparedness: How can we, as faith communities, be neighbourhood anchors – resilience hubs to ready ourselves before disaster strikes?

Starting in the spring, with the support of Ontario150 funds, we grew communities by engaging youth in planting and tending gardens: gardens for meditation and prayer, veggie plots to feed our neighbours, and habitats to support biodiversity – the abundance and diversity of life on earth, which is increasingly under threat.

In late spring, many in our networks accepted the Faith Commuter Challenge to get to worship without cars; we moved across the land as lightly as possible, by bikes, on foot, and by carpooling.

In the fall, we walked as allies with First Peoples in protecting the life-giving waters of the land’s Great Lakes.

All these things and more we did with the support we received from our various funders and you, our partners and supporters.

Lucy Cummings
Executive Director, Faith & the Common Good
How does a community plan and prepare for extreme weather emergencies? That was the focus of a Resilient Neighbourhoods workshop held in February 2017 at the Art Gallery of Hamilton. Hosted in partnership with CLARION (Community-Led Action to Resilience in Our Neighbourhoods), and Environment Hamilton, the day’s project was to identify and support the social capital that’s critical to effectively responding to, withstanding, and recovering from disaster.

The big picture – the risks that Hamilton faces – was presented by City of Hamilton staff (Emergency Management and Climate Change Management) followed by a role playing game: Resilientville. This game asked players to think like neighbourhood stakeholders whose decisions can enhance the well being of residents in times of extreme stress. One special guest was the Tamarack Institute’s Sylvia Cheuy, a leading expert on creating community change, who offered her experience of best practices from across Canada and the USA. The point is, it takes a community to prepare for the worst; we can’t depend on government to get us through the first 72 hours of disaster. We need to help one another, and it begins with knowing our neighbours and building social strengths – which research shows is what is required to help weather the storm.

Thanks to generous sponsorship from The BMW Foundation for providing us with this opportunity!

Following this workshop, in the late fall, we were fortunate enough to receive a year-long seed grant from the Ontario Trillium Foundation to explore community resilience further in three GTHA communities: Hamilton, Toronto, and Brampton. Called the Lighthouse Project, it is inspired by the work of the City of Brampton’s Office of Emergency Management, which has been developing relationships with 22 faith communities across Brampton in preparing them to be emergency responders. The Lighthouse Project continues until November 2018.
The greenest building is the one that already exists. Regeneration Works: Places of Faith – www.placesoffaith.ca – is a collaboration between the National Trust for Canada and Faith & the Common Good to support capacity building in communities and congregations who are seeking to regenerate places of worship at risk of closure. Our coaching workshops bring together diverse stakeholders across communities to build support networks and share “regeneration” best practices – including new models of shared governance/usage; community engagement tools; mission-led planning; interfaith/ecumenical collaborations – to enhance the “mission per square foot” and community value of our places of faith. Highlights include:

- On February 25th, our workshop in Peterborough (co-hosted with the City of Peterborough, the Peterborough Architectural Conservation Advisory Committee, and our partners at the National Trust for Canada) brought together local faith groups, heritage and community organizations to share their experience, concerns, and creative solutions to the challenges confronting places of faith in south-central Ontario, with a special emphasis on the challenges faced by rural and small-town places of faith.

- On March 11th, our 2017 annual forum – “Exploring Sacred Space: Regenerating Places of Faith” – was held at the University of Toronto, co-hosted by the Green Awakening Network, Toronto Area Interfaith Council, University of Toronto’s Multifaith Centre, and the National Trust for Canada. In addition to key notes and workshops, 4 congregations – Hare Krishna Toronto, Fairlawn Avenue United Church, Manor Road United Church, and International Muslim Organization of Toronto – shared their faith property renewal journey.

- Regeneration Works & US-based Partners for Sacred Places are supporting the leadership and members of St. Paul’s Presbyterian Church, Hamilton to undertake a thoughtful and groundbreaking effort to explore new models, tools, and resources that could help the congregation develop a plan for the future that is sustainable and community-oriented.

ONTARIO 150 YOUTH GARDENS

FCG participated in Canada’s and Ontario’s 150th anniversary through the receipt of a grant from the Province of Ontario’s Ontario150 Youth Partnerships Program. This grant allowed us to engage and support youth in creating new gardens at eight faith communities across the province.

Two faith-based schools were selected in Halton – a small Muslim elementary school and a large Catholic high school. Students really enjoyed the opportunity for hands-on work. Acknowledging the challenge of the 150th for First Nations in Canada, our coordinator worked with First Nations representatives to ensure recognition of the territorial land on which the gardens were built.

In Toronto, we worked with youth at a mosque, a synagogue, and a United church, creating native plant gardens in all three locations. One result was a new Native Plant Garden Guide resource, which can be found on our website.

Our Ottawa chapter worked with a rural francophone Catholic elementary school and an ecumenical summer day camp to create edible community gardens. The final garden was a meditative garden in a cemetery beside an Anglican church.

This project allowed us to form new partnerships and strengthen existing ones. It was wonderful to see the youth truly take charge of some of these projects and run with them!
The inaugural Faith Commuter Challenge was a truly coast-to-coast event. Faith communities from Halifax to Vancouver participated in the challenge, encouraging their congregations to get to worship without their car. The challenge ran June 2-11, covering two weekends and the intervening week. In total, 41 faith communities in 5 provinces logged trips by alternative modes of transportation, saving over 1,500 kg of CO₂ emissions.

We loved the blog submissions from across the country! Participants reported “blessing of the bikes” ceremonies, bike tours, alternative transportation workshops, and simply finding new ways to get to worship. Challenges discovered during this pilot project included lack of public transit options in some areas and difficulties with the online registration system in some older communities. We were heartened to hear how carpooling can create new connections within communities.

Many thanks to the Automotive Recyclers of Canada’s Grants in Gear program, which supported this cross-country initiative.
On September 24, 2017, the Great Lakes Water Walk (Nibi Mosewin Onji Nayaano-nibimaang Gichigamiin) invited people from all backgrounds to join Indigenous Grandmothers, Knowledge Holders, and Elders in a day of “walking for the water” along the Toronto waterfront. (For details: http://greatlakeswaterwalk.ca/).

Heartfelt Miigwech / Niá:wen / Thank you to all in our network who responded to the call and walked, supported, spoke to, stood by, and prayed for the water on this special day.

We estimated that close to 1,000 people took part in the walk and final blessing ceremony, despite the extreme heat alert. We couldn’t have pulled it off without the love and support of so many of you.

Toronto’s Adria Vasil’s (Ecoholic) beautifully captured what participating in the walk meant to so many of us (nowtoronto.com/lifestyle/ecoholic/great-lakes-water-walk-walking-on-water):

"The copper pail passes into my hands .... It’s heavier than it looks.... Next to me an Indigenous man, a housing worker by day, takes his turn holding the staff. It’s his first water walk, too. I’m determined not to let any water splash excessively as I walk and remember what [Elder Dr. Shirley] Williams said earlier about sending the water good thoughts.

I try my hand at praying and tell the water that I hope the city will start taking better care of it as tears start welling up in my eyes. I hold them back. Can’t waste precious water when it’s a sweltering 30ºC at 9 am. Another woman taps my shoulder and offers to share the load."
Falling back into the tangle of water walkers, I recall Williams’s words from our chat a few days earlier about carrying the water. “I have seen women change how they look at the water, how they treat the water. They make changes within themselves and also within their family. They stop putting chemicals in the water. They’ll save water.”

“It’s important to bring the water awareness of the four races to this great area,” Liz Osawamick, [Great Lakes Water Walk advisory council member and Anishinaabe Midewiwin-kwe community leader], says to me, “because you have all kinds of nationalities that live here in Toronto. We are made of water. It’s [critical] that they know how sacred and important the water is to everyone.”

Our network will continue to look for further opportunities to support Sacred Water Walking, under the ceremonial leadership of Indigenous Grandmothers, Knowledge Holders, and Elders, as a powerful way to honour Nibi (water) and walk towards a better future for all.
In 2017, the highlight of our climate action agenda was our work with the Environmental Commissioner of Ontario, Dr. Dianne Saxe, via a series of regional active-learning events organized by our Greening Sacred Spaces chapters.

- On June 26th, Environment Hamilton hosted “Facing Climate Change” at the Hamilton Central Library, which featured a featured a local climate action fair and recognition ceremony for the faith groups who participated in the Hamilton “Faith Commuter Challenge”.
- On Sept 14th, Halton Environmental Network hosted “Stewards for Change” at the Anglican Church of the Incarnation, where Mayor Rob Burton, Regional Councillor Allan Elgar, Environmental Policy Director Cindy Toth, and many other representatives from the community of Oakville were present to discuss the urgency of climate change.
- On Sept 18th, Jaffari Community Centre hosted “Supporting Multi-Faith Climate Action”, which featured a multi-faith panel of York regional faith-based leaders who were role modeling green buildings, sustainable urban agriculture, and waste management best practices for the larger community.

Dr. Saxe, who has been a green team leader in her own community of faith, traveled to these gatherings to highlight the important role for Ontario’s communities of faith in the central moral challenge of our time – climate change. Her key message: climate change is having an immense impact on Ontario’s people, environment and economy. The choices we make today matter deeply if want the chance to positively shape what’s coming. So:

- Figure out your carbon footprint and reduce it by 5% every year.
- Get ready for what’s coming. We’re in for a wetter and wilder world, and we must prepare for such incidents.
- Speak up. We need to talk to our elected leaders about climate change and the actions that are needed.
Green Sacred Space Awards in 2017

Each year, FCG presents Green Sacred Space awards to recognize and celebrate those faith communities that have achieved excellence in greening their sacred spaces, as well as engaging community to do the same. The awards presentations provide a networking opportunity for attendees to share ideas.

In 2017 the following chapters celebrated:

Our Toronto Chapter presented an award to the Hare Krishna Temple at the FCG annual forum in March. The forum took place at the Multi-faith Centre at the University of Toronto and focused on faith communities that have regenerated their buildings. Four faith communities, including the Temple, gave presentations on their accomplishments. The event featured talks by Dr. Stephen Scharper on sacred space in religious thought and by Dr. Mike Wood-Daly on The Halo Project, measuring the social impact and value of faith communities.

The Halton-Peel GSS Annual Awards Night & Networking Event took place in May at the Joshua Creek Heritage Arts Centre (Oakville, ON). The keynote speaker was Tristan Mohamed, a board member of our partner, Halton Environmental Network. As well as being a lawyer, Tristan teaches meditation classes and spoke about eco-spirituality. Awards were presented to Solel Congregation, Mississauga, and St. Simon’s Anglican Church, Oakville.

Our Ottawa Chapter presented the 2017 Green Sacred Space awards to both Glebe-St. James United Church and Paroisse Sainte-Marie d’Orléans at individual events at the faith communities.
