

Dear For Our Kids supporter,

Today seemed like a good time to share a cross-country roundup of action from FOK teams, along with ways you can be involved. Meant to inspire you and boost you out of the winter blahs!

If you could use a regular dose of hope, we encourage you to join a For Our Kids team near you (find one here) or start your own! Finding a community of support and collaborators for climate action really can lighten the darkness.

Teams in and around Vancouver are co-hosting a public online talk by Molly Murphy on Feb. 10 at 8pm PT. Mother of three, BIPOC activist, journalist, and a social justice warrior, Molly will speak about her frontline experience with RCMP violence on unceded Indigenous lands in Pacheedaht, Dididaht and Wet'suwet'en territories.

Join to hear why we need to connect the dots between the climate crisis and policing.

Parents in Burnaby joined the call for their city council to endorse a Fossil Fuel Non-Proliferation Treaty - and they didn't let a closed city hall meeting stop them. They gathered outside with their kids and met councillors on their way to the meeting. Read about one parent's inspiration to take this on.

Is this something you're interested in pursuing in your community? Find out how.

You may have heard there's a provincial election happening in Ontario this spring/summer. Teams across the province are working together to compile candidate platforms and views on climate issues so they can be shared with voters.

Want to be part of this action? Let us know at hello@fourkids.ca

Members of the Montréal team are enrolled in the University of Alberta's Indigenous Canada course online, starting the week of February 7th and they're inviting anyone from the network to join them to share group learnings and explore the weekly course discussion questions together.

Interested? You can audit the course for free and the time commitment is 2-3 hours/week for 12 weeks. You can request to join the private Facebook group here.

Do you live in, or have friends or family living in Nova Scotia or Alberta? We're holding two special welcome calls especially for Nova Scotians and Albertans.

Please join us, and/or share this invitation to attend:

Nova Scotia welcome call Feb. 24 at 7pm AT

Alberta welcome call March 10 at 7pm MT

---

Have you got ideas or projects you're working on? We'd love to hear about them. Reach out. Contact Natalie (natalie@forourkids.ca) or join one of our monthly welcome calls.

Take care, and thanks for all you do For Our Kids.
