It's the End of the System and This Midterm Is Like No Other

There once was a time when one blue-collar income could support a family. While the kind of economy which could support that has been under attack for decades, we are now at a breaking point. Uncontrolled money-printing for boondoggles, bailouts, corporate welfare, and war, and Biden's revival of green and free trade policies are on the verge of finishing off what is left of our real economy. The drug epidemic and the culture of hedonism and despair which is being codified in our education system are destroying our children.

Those who would run the world are not hiding their intentions. French President Macron recently declared that "the age of abundance is over," and leaders of the World Economic Forum, which recently set up shop in Detroit, envision a world in which "you will have nothing, and you will be happy." Their "green" future is one of limited energy, limited mobility, limited opportunity, and limited food supply—unless you are rich.

What those who have brought about these policies understand (better than most candidates) is what is at stake in this election. They know that their system, based on globalization, speculation, and anti-growth policies, is at a breaking point. They know that this election is not about an aggregation of hot-button topics. It is about whether a political force will exist, under the leadership of Donald Trump, which can take down their system and restore our sovereignty. That is the message that Americans want to hear, not the tired playbook of the Republican and Democratic "Uniparty."

We need a revival of those American System policies which developed a continent, built the TVA, forged the "Arsenal of Democracy," and sent Americans to the Moon. Despite being under attack from the moment he stepped into office, Donald Trump tried to do that, with his reversal of free-trade and green policies, and his efforts to rebuild our infrastructure, reshore our manufacturing, restart our advanced energy technologies, and revive our space program.

The 2022 midterm elections give us the opportunity to further build the movement that will effect a 180-degree turnaround for our nation and our economy. This is possible, because we are in the middle of a transformation of the Republican Party back into the Party of Abraham Lincoln—a party of workers, producers, entrepreneurs, builders, and visionaries. That transformation is being driven by an ever-growing grassroots movement which is intent on turning the Republican branch of the "Uniparty" into a vehicle which, with the leadership of Donald Trump, can create an economy that will give us a future.

Not every Republican candidate understands or is committed to this. But we believe that if we, the citizens, mobilize around the following policies, we can lead the Republican Party into this transformation:

- Abolish the Federal Reserve, cutting off the spigot to the speculators, mega-corporations, and global elite. Reestablish a National Bank which will provide credit for the "re-Americanization" of our economy, and which will invest in advanced manufacturing, energy production, space technologies (i.e., not "green").
- Enact tariff policies which protect our industrial base and supply chains.
- Return education to classical principles which cherish our children's minds, rather than forcing them to fixate on their bodies.

By asking you to vote Republican this election, we are asking you to, in truth, vote for the Republic and to join us in fighting for the policies and the quality of leadership which can secure it.
