It's time for change

A local choice

- Nick has lived in the Constituency since the late '90s - in East Dulwich, Herne Hill and North Dulwich. His three children all went to school in the area and, over the years, he has also lived in Bermondsey and Oval.

With a record of campaigning & winning elections

- Nick is a local Liberal Democrat Councillor in Southwark. He has campaigned in General Elections, By-Elections, Local Elections and has been instrumental in leading #People's Vote campaigning in the Constituency. He works closely with the Greater London Assembly and TfL on key resident concerns around public transport and urban redevelopment and affordable housing.

Life outside politics

- For many years, Nick was a market researcher working with commercial organisations and charities to better understand their target audiences. In the run-up to the 2018 local elections, Nick ran research groups with local residents across Southwark, helping to shape the successful Liberal Democrat election manifesto, delivering an increase in seats for the first time in many years.

My view on the Dulwich & West Norwood Constituency

- Our Constituency is naturally liberal-minded
- It tends to be pro-EU, pro open borders, concerned by climate change and worried about lack of affordable housing and air-pollution
- ...and yet it has had a Labour MP ever since the constituency was created. Helen Hayes is notable for one thing only – keeping her head down and staying quiet
- In 2019, with BREXIT looming and both Labour and Tories imploding, change is in the air.
- We have a once-in-a-generation opportunity. Many Labour and Tory voters feel politically homeless.
- In my time campaigning across the constituency, it is clear to me that voters are ready for change.
- Beyond being anti-BREXIT, many voters are unclear what we, as Liberal Democrats, stand for; this is our challenge and our opportunity – to clearly convey our values to voters. They are natural Liberal Democrats, they just don't know it yet!
