

Schumer Blows Pot in Face of Biden, Electorate

Special to New Federalist
NEW YORK, Aug. 8—The Congress’ head pot pusher, Senate Majority Leader Chuck Schumer (D-NY) filed new federal legislation to decriminalize weed on the federal level and to allow states to set their own marijuana laws without reprisal from the Justice Department. The bill was filed July 21, with the backing of two other prominent Democrat pot advocates, Corey Booker (D-NJ) and Ron Wyden (D-OR).

Opponents of the pot legalization drive immediately went into a full mobilization to make sure that pot pusher Schumer’s effort fails. One of them, Smart Approaches to Marijuana (SAM), has put out a warning that, aside from the dangers of decriminalization, Schumer’s bill would open the door for Big Tobacco to take over the commercialized pot industry. They are calling on its larger membership to tell their Senators to oppose the bill.

“I continue to be astounded that my opponent Chuck Schumer, places such a high priority on legalizing pot, given that we are now on the brink of war with both Russia and China, the economy is in tatters, and Americans are suffering, not from a lack of drugs, but from horrific hyperinflation of prices and severe anxiety related to that,” said Diane Sare, the LaRouche Independent candidate who is challenging Schumer in the Nov. 8 election. “It is high time we give this pothead his walking papers.”

Little Chance
There is little chance of the bill passing this session, or any session, for that matter. In fact, given the heat of the midterm elections, there are few in the Democratic Caucus that want the controversial issue brought forward now. “I will say this,” said one Democratic source, “Chuck may be loyal to his pot-head supporters but he isn’t doing any of us any favors. Most people don’t give a damn about this and the ones that do have a negative opinion on the matter.”

In order to make it through, the bill would need every vote in the Democratic caucus—a total impossibility—and then 10 more votes from the GOP.

But Schumer, as if blinded by

Sen. Chuck Schumer’s (D-NY) (R) insisted on introducing new pot decriminalization legislation over the objection of his President, Joe Biden (L), who won’t sign it.

the smoke in his own eyes, says he intends to proceed and bring the matter to vote on the floor of the Senate before the end of the year.

A Slap at Biden
The pot bill also points to the growing rift between, Schumer, the most powerful Democrat in the Senate, and the current occupant of the White House, Joe Biden. The President has reportedly laid much of the blame for the inability to get

Republicans Caught in ‘Independence Party’ Fraud

Special to New Federalist
NEW YORK, Aug. 9—As reported in the July issue of this newspaper, the Republican Party’s slate of statewide candidates, led by gubernatorial candidate Lee Zeldin, and including U.S. Senate candidate Joe Pinion, submitted nearly 1000 pages of photocopied petition sheets in a fraudulent attempt to secure a November ballot line for the so-called Independence Party. Because of the objection filed by Andrew Kolstee of the Libertarian Party, assisted by Sare for Senate volunteers, the Board of Elections was forced last month to disqualify the “Independence Party” line from the ballot, citing the over 12,800 invalid signatures in its submission.

Zeldin owes the voters of New York an explanation for this, since the signer of the cover sheets for each volume was none other than Eric Amidon, Zeldin’s campaign manager! Knowingly submitting fraudulent petition signatures constitutes a felony crime, and a complaint has now been filed by Democratic State Sen. Zellnor Myrie (Brooklyn) asking the Albany County District Attorney to investigate. Gov. Kathy Hochul is now exploiting the matter in her campaign, issuing a statement in which she holds Zeldin responsible for the fraud. He has strongly denied any responsibility for what occurred.

Sare: ‘Shocked and Disgusted’
Reached for comment, LaRouche independent candidate for U.S. Senate Diane Sare said, “We were quite shocked and disgusted when we saw the photocopied pages. After the Republican, Democratic, Conservative, and Working Families parties all combined to try to prevent truly independent candidates such as myself, or legitimate minor parties like the Libertarian and Green parties from ballot access by tripling the petitioning requirements, they turn in this piece of garbage, demonstrating that, according to the language of their own lawyers, the Republican Party, is not ‘viable’ because they were unable to meet the 45,000 signature threshold they had established, without committing massive fraud. My campaign was the only one that accomplished this feat and should be recognized as a major campaign. Schumer should be required to debate me, for example.

“This should not be used by the Democrats, who are also known for submitting fraudulent signatures, as we saw in Brooklyn County Committee races, to cast aspersions on Zeldin’s legitimate questions about the 2020 presidential election,” Sare stated. “I would urge both the major parties to stop engaging in fraudulent activity because it confirms the view held by too many Americans that all elections are ‘rigged’ and there’s no point in voting. My campaign, both by succeeding to meet the absurd requirement, and by exposing the fraudulent signatures has made an important contribution to bringing the citizens back into the electoral process.”

The Democrats want to hold GOP gubernatorial candidate Rep. Lee Zeldin (R) (inset) responsible for the fraudulent photocopied petition pages submitted on behalf of the “Independence Party,” but independent candidate for U.S. Senate Diane Sare says there is more to the fraud than that.

U.S. Senate Candidate Sare Target of Ukrainian Blacklist, Threats

food to the entire human race. On that foundation, medicine, hospitals, and health personnel are trained in the tens of millions on an emergency basis to overcome the spread of species-threatening pandemics. This is what the Ukrainian government’s NATO masters are rightly terrified of, because the “unipolar world” idea upon which NATO expansion is based is thus thrown out the window.

Blacklist = Kill List
Former United States Marine Corps intelligence officer Scott Ritter, also named on the blacklist, wrote an open letter to New York Senators Schumer and Gillibrand (D) which was published by Consortium News. He wrote in part:

“As a constituent whose name has appeared on a so-called ‘blacklist’ published by the Ukrainian Center for Countering Disinformation, my personal and professional life has been, and continues to be, detrimentally impacted by the chilling effect of being labeled a ‘Russian propagandist’ for simply exercising the right to free speech guaranteed by the United States Constitution. Moreover, Ukraine has a history of converting ‘blacklists’ of this nature into ‘kill lists,’ where those who speak out against the policies of the Ukrainian government are being murdered or threatened with violence. I am certain you agree with me that Congress cannot be in a position where, through its actions, foreign governments are provided the means to intimidate citizens of the United States from exercising their Constitutionally protected rights regarding free speech.”

In an Aug. 3 article, also published by Consortium News, entitled “Chuck Schumer’s War on Free Speech,” Ritter highlights the targeting of U.S. Senator Rand Paul (R-KY), also named on the list, who had the temerity to demand accountability as to how the $40 billion being sent to Ukraine was being spent, for which Schumer accused him of “strengthening Putin’s hand.”

“But There Is More”
In a section set off by the above words, Ritter then accurately takes up the case of “LaRouche candidate Diane Sare” who successfully attained ballot status by filing over 66,000 signatures and surpassing a deliberately impossible requirement of 45,000 set by Schumer-controlled Democrats.

Ritter writes, “Diane Sare was singled out by the Schumer-funded, State Department-supported Center for Countering Disinformation as an ‘information terrorist’ who should be prosecuted as a ‘war criminal’ because of her public stance challenging the narrative about the Ukraine conflict.

“That’s right — Chuck Schumer helped create the organizational structures which have attacked the reputation of a challenger for his Senate seat, threatening her with political violence and more for the ‘crime’ of challenging Schumer on the issue of Ukraine.”

Ritter concludes, “I hope that both Rand Paul and Diane Sare pursue whatever legal recourse is available to them to expose and shut down a Schumer-supported law that allows U.S. taxpayer money to underwrite a campaign targeting U.S. citizens, including serving senators and political challengers, with intimidation and more for the ‘crime’ of exercising their First Amendment right of free speech.”

There is another Federal candidate on the list as well, who also spoke at a Schiller Institute conference: Geoff Young, the Democratic Party nominee for the House of Representatives in Kentucky’s 6th district. His opposition to funding “Nazis in Ukraine” was a major issue in his primary election, and likely a factor in his victory.

Will the State Department denounce this blacklisting of American citizens, or defend it—including by choosing to say nothing about it? What is Senator Chuck Schumer’s answer to Scott Ritter? Does Schumer defend not only Diane Sare’s right, but responsibility to run and advocate those policies she thinks are in the best interests of the United States? Will he publicly state that to be the case?

Challenging the Lies
On Thursday, July 28, a group of independent-minded writers, journalists and thinkers, most of them former participants in symposia organized by the Schiller Institute, began circulating the following response to an operation, launched by the multiple intelligence agencies of NATO, to discredit them and prevent their exposure of the true nature of the so-called “Ukraine conflict.” That statement reads:

“We, the participants in various conferences of the Schiller Institute, are accused of promoting ‘Russian propaganda’ on a list posted by the Ukrainian ‘Center for Countering Disinformation,’ which is officially part of Ukraine’s National Security and Defense Council, operating under the authority of the President.

“In times of war, publishing such a list is tantamount to targeting individuals. It is all the more unacceptable that the list agglomerates the names of many speakers, representing top institutions from around the globe, with diverse opinions, who are involved in a dialogue, searching to arrive at peace in the interest of all.

The senseless slaughter of the war that Ukraine can never win continues, as the U.S. ships weapons to kill Russians.

“To assume that such a wide array of speakers are all ‘Putin agents’ and can’t think for themselves, can only be explained by a belief in conspiracy theories, or as mere vulgar propaganda, or both. The key question is whether the listed speakers are promoting viewpoints consonant with the truth.

“Normally, this would be up to an audience to decide. But the U.S./NATO efforts to blacklist those that would offer any ‘alternative narrative’ on Ukraine, until now, remains unchallenged.

“So, hats off to Ukraine for providing a handy list of speakers who voice different ideas.

“Those interested in finding out the truth will now be better able to compare the official story—the ‘narrative’—with an uncompromised critique, determine which can bear close scrutiny, and decide for themselves which analysis is closer to the truth.”

Murderous Criminal Process
There are well-founded reasons for the trans-Atlantic and NATO forces that actually run the proxy government of Ukraine to be upset with Diane Sare, and other fearless persons who spoke clearly about “what’s really going on” in that nation. Ukraine’s recent destruction is an ugly affair that began in 2014 with the “Project Democracy” illegal, criminal overthrow of its democratically elected government, directly managed by the United States State Department’s Victoria Nuland. Now, Ukraine is being offered as a mass human sacrifice to the goals of what some call the “Great Reset.”

Ukraine, emphatically including its multi billion-dollar international black-market weapons trade, is just one step in a larger criminal process, laid out at the November 2021 Glasgow COP26 Hallowe’en ghou-fest by Britain’s Prince Charles, former Bank of England head Mark Carney, and billionaire former NYC mayor Mike “Mouse-his economic agenda through Congress at the doorstep of the arrogant and annoying Schumer. “He [Schumer]acts more like a two-bit thug than a compromiser,” said one source familiar with his negotiating style.

Schumer claimed responsibility for holding the Democratic Caucus together long enough yesterday to pass a $740 bn package of what is likely to prove to be worthless economic measures, dubbed the Inflation Reduction Act, through the Senate, with Vice President Kamela Harris casting the deciding vote. Sources report that, to get this done, several Senators urged Schumer to “go easy” on his pot agenda.

Discussions between the President and his Senate Majority leader have been described as ranging from tense to outright unfriendly.

The President is reportedly furious that Schumer has gone ahead with the pot decriminalization push. Biden, who is an opponent of drug legalization, has already told the New York Senator that he will not sign the bill if it is passed.

Sare: Defeat Central Bank Dictatorship with New Bretton Woods

away from sovereign government, influenced by the whim of the electorate. Place it in the hands of ‘experts’ who can make the hard, even deadly decisions.”

Battle Lines Drawn
“So now the battle lines are clear,” said Diane Sare, LaRouche independent candidate for US Senate from New York. “We’ve known for some time that this bubble will go the way of all bubbles. The question is who is going to control what happens when it meets its inevitable end? Who will make the policy? The Fed and the bankers intend to use the collapse to wipe out constitutional government so that they can come away with a fascist global order. That’s not my plan! We must use the powers protected in the US Constitution to put the whole mess through a government-supervised bankruptcy reorganization. Let’s give the whole thing a flea dip and get rid of all speculative fleas. Let’s save what we need to create a truly productive economy, not a green energy murderous rip-off. We must reinstate the Glass-Steagall Act to separate and protect the necessary functions of commercial banking. And, we must launch a tough investigation into how this happened, with an eye towards a criminal prosecution of the culprits. My opponent, the Senator from Wall Street, Chuck

Schumer will do all in his power to prevent this, which is another reason why he must go.

No Rule By ‘Experts’
“There is no need for any committee of experts to rule over us,” said Sare. “These fools are dreaming or on crack if they think we are about to let that happen! We have the answer as to what we need: a New Bretton Woods system, one that will facilitate the issuance of trillions of dollars of directed credit for development projects across the globe, and which operates consistent with our constitutional principle of the General Welfare. We will have willing partners for this effort in the BRICS (Brazil, Russia, India, China, South Africa) and other organizations in the east.”

War or the New Bretton Woods
“There’s another point to be reckoned with,” said Sare. “There is no way that Russia, China, or India, among others, will go along with this new fascist bankers’ world order. So, what do you do about that? You are headed for war, a general thermonuclear war.

“The west’s global financial order is disintegrating,” concluded Sare. “Let’s take advantage of the opportunity to establish a new, equitable Bretton Woods system, as proposed by Schiller Institute chairwoman Helga Zepp-LaRouche.”

To Free the USA, Exonerate LaRouche

Continued from page 1 associates as a badge of honor; this has become more evident in the era of censorship and wartime propaganda we are living through today.

In the centennial year of LaRouche’s birth, we find ourselves on the verge of either plunging over the abyss into thermonuclear war with another major nuclear superpower, and/or seeing billions of people on this planet, including many in our own nation, die a miserable death of starvation brought about by the willfully evil policies of “the Great Reset,” or what Prince Charles calls “Global Britain.” LaRouche must be accorded his rightful place in history now as a great philosopher/statesman so that a desperate people may have access to the principles of physical economy and statecraft he so well understood and which he taught me and others, and which can free us from this trap.

The Power of Reason

The Power of Reason, and in particular the power of Lyn’s profound ideas resonating with the minds of others, has had surprising effect. In 1980, LaRouche met Ronald Reagan at a candidates’ debate in New Hampshire, in which they were seated next to each other. He lost no time in sharing with the Republican Presidential Primary candidate his idea for ending the Mutual and Assured Destruction nuclear doctrine of the odious Henry Kissinger, by defeating nuclear warheads with a proposed new laser beam technology which could prevent them from reaching their targets. Unlike too many American political leaders today, Reagan believed that nuclear war was likely to result in the annihilation of the human race and were best to never be fought. He listened to LaRouche’s idea with great interest and, with support from another opponent of MAD, Dr. Edward Teller, adopted it as his own. Key to what became known as the “Strategic Defense Initiative,” was that its technology was to be shared with the Soviet Union. Lyn was Reagan’s back channel to the Soviets, who foolishly rejected the President’s offer, despite LaRouche’s accurate warning that rejection would lead to the collapse of the Soviet Union and the Warsaw Pact by the end of the 1980s.

LaRouche Organizes Russians

After serving five years in Federal prison from 1989-94, LaRouche visited Russia and held a remarkable dialogue with the leading scientists and economists in that country. By the late 90’s, LaRouche reiterated his warning about the looming collapse of the trans-Atlantic system, and called for a “Four Power” agreement involving the USA, Russia, China, and India, which is desperately needed today, and which has been sabotaged by the UK/NATO/Biden Administration provocation of Russia, and House Speaker Nancy Pelosi’s deliberately destructive visit to Taiwan, which has served only to advance British imperial goal of severely damaging US-China relations, and causing our economy to inch yet closer to its doom.

The purpose of the slanders and vilification of LaRouche, which are being amplified today through actions such as the blacklist just published by the State Department-supported “Ukrainian Center for Countering Disinformation,” which attacks me and other participants of Schiller Institute conferences as Kremlin propagandists, is to prevent you, the American people, from having access to knowledge of the scientific principles which will allow us to snatch victory from the jaws of defeat.

If civilization is to survive this current crisis, the name Lyndon LaRouche must take its rightful place in history among the names of Socrates, Leibniz, J.S. Bach, Dante Alighieri, Johannes Kepler, and hundreds of others who were shunned or worse in their time. Why should we stupidly put ourselves and our fellow human beings through the hell we are facing by failing to implement LaRouche’s proposed solutions now? In order for those policies to succeed and gain the necessary support, the stigma placed on them by the enemies of mankind must be removed.

LaRouche’s voluminous writings should be studied in every university, and his programs for global economic development and restoration of the American System of Political Economy should be the subject of Congressional hearings and think tank seminars, as opposed to the banal and insane subjects they are debating and legislating these days.

Get Me the Quaker Hornblower!

In 2010, LaRouche held a meeting with a group of his leading associates, seeking to put together a slate of candidates for Federal office, since as he said, “Once you’re over 90, there are no guarantees,” having made his final bid for the Democratic Presidential nomination in 2004. As they named various younger members around the country as potential candidates, LaRouche said in his typical pointed, but humorous way, “Get me the Quaker horn-blower!” – That was me.

Lyn and I had shared many moments of mirth discussing our common Quaker upbringing and idiomatic expressions which only Quakers would use. I was honored, but also sobered by the awesome responsibility of representing his outlook in the high-profile position of a candidate for U.S. Congress in 2012. Since he was nearly 90 at the time, I also had to ask myself whether I were prepared to carry that torch if he passed on before the election. I think you can see by my actions today, how I responded to his request. Let us make 2022 the Year of LaRouche with everything that idea implies. It will make Prince Charles and the Queen, and their Ukrainian Nazis very unhappy, and that will be a good thing!

Mar-a-Lago Raid is Assault on Presidency, Constitution

By Diane Sare

I must strongly condemn this raid, not merely as an unwarranted assault on the residence and person of former President Trump but as an assault on the office of the Presidency and on the Constitutionally-guaranteed principle of self-government. This kind of judicial overreach always originates in London, as is evidenced by the August 4 London Guardian Op Ed by American writers Tribe and Atergut, and as experienced by those of us who worked on any of Lyndon LaRouche’s eight presidential campaigns. The British Empire has never accepted the American Revolution, and particularly since the death of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, has deployed its lackeys in the Departments of State and Justice, and particularly the FBI, to return us to our colonial identity, particularly by undermining the Constitutional institution of the Presidency. While former President Trump is a target, this is not merely about him personally, but about the institution of the Presidency, which is why this raid on his home is so outrageous.

This recent action by the FBI is one of many attacks on our Republic, which include the recent issuance of a blacklist by the Senator Schumer-funded, State Department-backed Ukrainian “Center to Counter Disinformation” targeting 72 international figures, starting with 30 individuals who have spoken at conferences convened by the Schiller Institute, founded by LaRouche’s widow Helga Zepp-LaRouche. Several on the list are now, or have been candidates for, or holders of federal office in the United States. This includes myself, Democratic Congressional nominee Geoff Young and U.S. Senator Rand Paul, both of Kentucky, and former US Congresswoman and presidential candidate Tulsi Gabbard. As forcefully stated by former U.S. Marine Intelligence Officer Scott Ritter, also blacklisted, Senator Chuck Schumer and other representatives have voted to fund foreign organizations which are actually interfering in the American electoral process by defaming and threatening candidates!

Over 35 years ago, on Oct. 6, 1986, the Leesburg, Virginia farmhouse of then-presidential candidate Lyndon LaRouche was surrounded by hundreds of FBI agents, U.S. Marshals and local law enforcement officers accompanied by helicopters and armored vehicle carriers, and somehow miraculously preceded by all of the mainstream news media, in a raid which included a plan to assassinate him. President Reagan ordered the George H.W. Bush/William Weld DoJ to back off, which thankfully averted any bloodshed. Nonetheless, the subsequent phony trial and conviction of Mr. LaRouche and over a dozen of his associates, who would spend years in prison, obviously prevented Lyndon LaRouche from being a major contender in the 1988 presidential election.

LaRouche would later write in a 2004 article entitled, The Night They Came to Kill Me, that one aspect of the intent to eliminate him was “my opposition to the so-called ‘utopian’ military doctrines currently associated with ‘beast-man’ Dick Cheney...” and “my intention to reverse the folly of the past forty years’ downward drift of the U.S.A., from the world’s leading producer nation, to today’s predatory mess of Roman Empire-style ‘post-industrial’ bread and circuses.”

The most powerful action in the face of this assault on our Republic from abroad would be the full exoneration of Lyndon LaRouche, and the implementation of his policies.

We Must Fight for New Paradigm of Peace, Development

The whole narrative that sanctions are the justified punishment on the side of the morally-superior democracies against the morally-so-inferior autocracies is fake news. Economic sanctions are a form of warfare. If you look case by case, they almost never punish the establishments of the countries they are directed against. Sanctions are meant to make the living conditions for the ordinary people so miserable that eventually they rise up and get rid of their respective governments. So, it’s a form of color revolution, regime change, and it makes the people suffer. What happens? For example, Cardinal Zenari from Syria already a couple of years ago issued an urgent appeal to the world, saying that the Caesar sanctions against Syria are making the lives of more than 90% of the Syrian population unbearable, leading to the premature death of many. Sanctions are a form of war. It’s like Clausewitz saying that the military is a continuation of politics by different means. Sanctions are a form of warfare, and that has been stated by Russia and China in many security conferences. It is simply something that in a world which is so full of perils—we have an acute war danger; the danger of a third world war breaking out. Many people are warning that we are closer to that than at any time, even the height of the Cuban Missile Crisis; it’s more dangerous now.

So, we should stop this. We should stop sanctions as an illegitimate means of political behavior. From that standpoint, it’s not yet the reason to be jubilant, because it’s only a removal of something which was terrible. It’s not yet the solution, but I think we should really be happy because it’s a step in the right direction. And that means we can do more. I think if we would go boldly now and take the full program and say if we want to address the world famine, then let’s double food production. All the farmers of the United States, of Europe, of all the other countries would be happy to double the food production. That could be done very easily, because all you have to do is lift the totally arbitrary and scientifically idiotic measures which have been imposed to restrict land use, to prohibit the use of fertilizer, of pesticides. The governments should provide all the farmers with enough credit to buy the necessary machinery, fertilizer, and other means to produce. In that way, hunger could be solved in a very short period of time, and that’s what we should keep mobilizing for.

Then, the next step, we can immediately start a diplomatic solution over the Ukraine crisis. There is no reason why anymore Ukrainians or other persons should die. We should immediately make a ceasefire, go to a diplomatic solution, and solve it in the same way this Istanbul declaration came about. So, I think we should move in this direction. We are at the abyss, but we have the chance to move back and go back to a completely different policy and a New Paradigm; because nothing less is necessary. SPEED: Diane, your thoughts? DIANE SARE: I would just go further on this breakthrough. You know you, Helga, have referenced frequently the Treaty of Westphalia, and even more so since (former British Prime Minister) Tony Blair declared that it was ended some years ago, which is the basis for a new architecture among nations; a New Bretton Woods as we are saying. Where every nation’s right to security is equally respected, and that means not a military doctrine merely, but food self-sufficiency, energy self-sufficiency, and that nations do act in the interest of others. That’s clearly what you see happening in this agreement. Many people are unduly cynical about this.

I really think it’s worth reflecting on the horror of years of religious warfare in Europe (that the Treaty of Westphalia ended). Anyone who thinks of any kind of religious fundamentalism knows that it is very brutal, very bloody. People commit all manner of atrocities. I would imagine that prior to this agreement being signed, if you tried to tell anyone engaged in this bloodshed that this was the desired outcome, they would have said “That’s ridiculous, it can never happen. Besides, this guy poked my wife’s eye out, and I have to get revenge.” It would have seemed impossible. But nonetheless, with some intense quiet work in the background among some people who had the vision to see that this trajectory would lead to nowhere, that no one would survive, that they would have generations of children who had known nothing but a state of perpetual war, they reached an agreement among nations, among warring parties to not look back in effect. No retribution, and also very critically, a whole package of debt forgiveness.

So, I think it’s very important for people today to think of the potential that’s available. There are probably millions of people in the streets around the world. The farmers in the Netherlands, Germany, and Italy; the truckers in Canada; the taxi drivers in Italy; the rail workers in the U.K.; the farmers in India. Millions of people are in a state of uproar because of the injustice. What we have to ensure is that a great moment does not find a little people, but a people who take advantage of their imagination to consider what the world actually should look like if we can overcome this injustice. I would say about this breakthrough that’s occurred with getting the grain out of these Ukrainian ports, you think of the question of the ending of McCarthyite witch hunts—have you no shame? That is the question. What have we countenanced? Torture at Abu Ghraib; bombing of civilians; drone killings of civilians; starvation of 14,000 newborn Afghan babies who died from January to March of this year. I certainly had a question: How much is the human race willing to tolerate? Have we no shame? Is there no point where we say, “No, this simply is not acceptable.”? And it seems that perhaps there is a bit of conscience there, which is the nature of human beings; the goodness of human beings which has been struck. We now have to really seize this to create in the minds of others a conception of what the world actually should look like without the censorship of our own pessimistic and cynical perceptions of what has happened in the last 60 or 70 years.

SPEED: Helga, I’m going to ask you in particular about your proposal about this Ad Hoc Committee for a New Bretton Woods System, because really you’re proposing something that goes way beyond just stopping the sanctions policy. This statement is actually around the idea of stopping the sanctions, and what we’re going to propose. <https://bit.ly/3pbdriA>

So, this is a big idea which also is proposing, that security interests should actually be arrived at from the standpoint of this larger design that you put here, as opposed to sanctions, or for that matter, even military confrontation. So, I’d just like you to say something about why you outlined your proposal in this way.

ZEPP-LAROUCHE: It is in affinity with the philosophy of Nicolaus of Kues [Nicholas of Cusa], who is one of the great thinkers of the 15th Century and the predecessor of Leibniz and just a very revolutionary thinker. He basically said that if you have a fundamental problem, you cannot try to solve all the little problems one by one. You have to solve the whole thing and change the axiomatic basis on which the problem arose. If you try in this world, many people say, “I don’t want to watch the news anymore. It’s just so depressing.” So many problems! I could give you now a one-hour rundown on all the problems in the United States and Europe and Africa and many areas. It’s too much; you have to somehow say something has gone wrong with the way politics has evolved, especially in the last 50 years. I think that’s about the timespan where things utterly went wrong with the abandoning of the old Bretton Woods system by introducing flexible exchange rates, by opening the world for this unlimited speculation where the rich become richer, and the poor become poorer. The assassination of John F. Kennedy; the cover-up there. There was a real paradigm shift about 50 years ago. In a certain sense, you have to put these 50 years in a big parenthesis and say let’s close the axioms which were associated with these last 50 years, and really think about how to put the world back on a basis which functions.

Now, what happened in this time interval, among other things, was that the Soviet Union disintegrated, and the Western countries became arrogant and said the end of history has started; soon the whole world will be dominated by the neo-liberal system and Western democracies. That was obviously one of the biggest misreadings ever. And right now, you have a world in complete disarray, because the United States has weaponized the dollar by the sanctions and by stealing assets from countries like Afghanistan, from Russia. So, many countries in the world are saying, we must have a new system, because if we rely on the dollar, then our assets may be stolen. In a certain sense, the United States has really shot itself in the foot by weaponizing the dollar. What you have right now is a process of de-dollarization going on. Many countries—especially in Asia; China, Russia, the BRICS countries, the Shanghai Cooperation Organization, the entire Global South—all of these countries are moving already to set up a new economic system, a new credit system. They are moving already in the direction of Hamiltonian banking by outlawing speculation, by putting credit generation into the hands of sovereign governments for the common good.

So, these changes are all happening. Europe is falling apart! Look what happened, (former British Prime Minister) Boris Johnson, this clown has been voted out basically by his own party, and the successors are not looking so great either, but he’s out. Now, Mario Draghi, the former head of the European Central Bank and prime minister of Italy, who was supposed to be in there as the guarantor for the continuation of the system of high speculation and money makes money: He is out, basically because the Italian population revolted against him. And even (Italian) President Mattarella could not keep him in, and Draghi himself, as our friends in Italy are telling us, wanted to get out because he knows the “big hurricane” is coming. This is what (JP Morgan head) Jamie Dimon is talking about the whole time, that we’re really heading for the big storm.

Now, the effort to have a European security architecture which was on the table when the Soviet Union disintegrated after 1989-1991 did not happen, because unfortunately the hopeful moment to build a common European house was sabotaged by the expanding of NATO five times, and now the sixth time is on the agenda. So, there is not going to be a European security system, because it will not function.

Now, what do you do in a situation as complex as the one I am touching upon—and I can only touch upon some aspects, because it’s obviously much more complex—what do you do when you have a situation which seems to be completely out of order, completely out of whack? Well, you have to establish a higher level of reason, where the interest of everybody is taken into account. And

Sare Campaign Celebrates Webb Space Telescope

by David Cherry
NEW YORK, July 28—With its characteristic optimism, Diane Sare’s Independent Senate Campaign celebrated the July 12 release of the first images from the James Webb Space Telescope with a July 15 internet symposium, “We Were Born for That Which Is Better: Implications of the Webb Telescope Discoveries.” She was joined by two engineers and a science writer in astrophysics. The video is posted on the Diane Sare YouTube channel and available on her Facebook page (<https://bit.ly/3SHstdl>).

Sare put the Webb project in context, saying, “It’s urgent that human beings return to their human, as opposed to their bestial identity and recognize those qualities which make us unique, which set us above and apart from the animal species, namely our creativity, our ability to discover new principles, or principles that we did not understand before, which allow us to have more power over nature and to create the conditions where more people can live on this planet with a higher standard of living.”

She continued, “There were 20,000 people involved in putting this gigantic machine together, and they worked together... from many far-flung parts of the planet, on a shared mission to do something that would allow mankind to achieve great breakthroughs, and to get a picture of what was going on in our universe from 13.1 billion years ago to the present. As someone said, it is going to not only answer some questions, it’s going to create all kinds of [new] questions... That is perhaps the most optimistic aspect of this project, because we are going to discover enormous new potentials in the universe, enormous new discoveries, ... and it will give us a means of shifting our culture and our identity.”

An Inspiration to Youth
Joel Dejean, a LaRouche independent candidate in Texas 38th Congressional District, spoke next. He formerly worked as a design engineer for infrared systems for Texas Instruments. (For an article on his campaign, see this page.)

“The Webb is largely an infrared instrument,” he said, “a million miles away, in a stable solar orbit. Its primary mirror is 21 feet in diameter, too large for any rocket. So the mirror had to be a composite of hexagonal segments that could fold up. When it reached its destination, the engineers had to unfold not only the mirror, but a five-layer heat shield to keep the instrumentation cold, at nearly absolute zero, so it does not radiate its warmth as infrared to the telescope.”

“As a result of such complexities, the Webb had 344 single points of failure threatening the whole project. “Yet it worked perfectly. The dedication, skill, and knowledge of the 20,000 scientists and engineers show what mankind can do when collaborating on a mission.

“This is an inspiration to youth, who now have something to look forward to beyond their social media. It inspires the nation, and the world!” Dejean stated.

The Universe Is Not Entropic
Cal Smith, also an engineer, employed quotations from Kepler, Einstein, Kraftt Ehrlicke, and Lyndon LaRouche to converge on this question, addressed to the Big Bang theory: “If the universe is winding down (or entropic), why are new stars and galaxies constantly created?” He showed the Deep Field image, the first image released by the Webb team, to make the point.

“Norbert Wiener wrote, ‘As entropy increases, the universe, and all the closed systems within the universe, tend naturally to deteriorate and lose their distinctiveness, to move ... to a state of chaos.... We are shipwrecked passengers on a doomed planet.’”

But Smith asked, “Then how come, the further out you go, the more galaxies, the more creation you get? ... We have the potential to challenge the very basic theories we’ve held, using the Webb Telescope.”

His conclusion was a new question: “We know the existing financial system is coming to an end... The proxy war against Russia is failing. The European economies are shrivelling. So there is going to be a new system. If we do our work, can we make the new system based on the true nature of mankind—mastery of the laws of the universe to solve real problems and to become space-faring nations?”

The Work of Ambartsumian
David Cherry, a longtime member of the LaRouche movement who formerly wrote for the LaRouche movement’s 21st Century Science & Technology magazine, reported that “astrophysicist Viktor Ambartsumian of Soviet Armenia—active from the 1920s to the end of the 1980s—had developed concepts consistently pointing to continuing creation.

“Ambartsumian was highly honored worldwide, including in the United States. But his ideas on continuing creation have been disregarded, even though astrophysics has been influenced based on the research for which he was so honored.

“Ambartsumian concluded: ‘1) in our epoch, stars, of all ages can be found within a finite volume of space,” such as a galaxy. New matter/energy is continually being created, but not arbitrarily. 2) Systems of multiple galaxies may not be in the process of collapse and collision but may have been a single object which broke up and spread apart. 3) Energy emitted by active galactic nuclei is from energy contained in the nucleus, not from the gravitational collapse of diffuse matter.”

One of Ambartsumian’s students, now deceased, contributed articles to 21st Century on some of his key ideas. A leading student of Ambartsumian, just contacted, confirmed his willingness to collaborate with the LaRouche movement.

Sare reported that the symposium has turned out to be one of the more popular she has presented, with 3,500 views.

Texas Candidate Joel Dejean: ‘A Positive Vision for the Future’

by Charles Notley
NEW YORK, July 26—One day last year, Joel Dejean in Houston received a phone call from Diane Sare. Seeking to increase the slate of independent candidates, she had remembered his prescient testimony to the Houston City Council warning of power outages and his various pro-fusion articles in EIR magazine. She asked if he would consider running for office. His response: “If elected, I will serve.”

Seven months later, on June 22, Dejean achieved ballot status as a LaRouche Independent candidate in the upcoming general election for U.S. Congress from Texas’s 38th C.D. Voters there will now have the freedom to choose an alternative on November 8 to the “brain dead” Democrat and Republican party picks just as New Yorkers have a real alternative in Sare to represent them in the U.S. Senate.

Together with Sare and other like-minded courageous individuals, Dejean’s aim is to get the U.S. back to its pro-technology and pro-culture roots. In a recent interview with this author, Dejean explained: “As a nation-wide independent candidates’ movement, we are abandoning the two-party system. The Democrats and Republicans are technically brain dead. We must pull out from those parties, the minor parties, and from the ranks of the Independents, people who look to the tradition of George Washington, Abraham Lincoln, Franklin Roosevelt and John F. Kennedy to turn the ship of state around.”

We Have the Alternative
“The two-party system is dying of its own disease. We do believe in redemption, however. Any brain-dead zombie who wishes to return to the human race is welcome. Voters in Texas’ 38th C.D. will choose me, because they want to live, they don’t want to die in a nuclear war or a hyperinflationary depression. There’s no guarantee, but we have the alternative.”

A sample of his proposals gives a flavor of what to expect from Congressman Dejean.

Domestically, implement Lyndon LaRouche’s Four Laws for economic survival. He supports Helga Zepp-LaRouche’s call for an ad-hoc committee to convoke a conference consisting of China, India, Japan, Russia, the U.S., and whatever nations can be drawn out of the European Union, to initiate the establishment of a New Bretton Woods international monetary system.

For residents of the 38th C.D., Dejean proposes to solve the energy crisis by massively increasing the use of fossil fuels until abundant nuclear power becomes available. He will scrap Texas’ over 11,000 existing wind turbines, halt the development of the planned massive offshore wind farms, and get National Bank credit flowing into producing small-scale and larger nuclear reactors (and, later, commercial fusion reactors). The many small-to-medium-sized machine tool companies in the 38th C.D. would be happy to submit bids for manufacturing the needed components.

A Proper Congressman
“When I assume my House seat in January, I will form an ‘Independent Thinkers’ Caucus.’ I’m sure that Diane Sare (in the Senate) and

I and others who join us, will be happy to conduct seminars in Congress to teach real economics. We might even throw in regular chorus practices and performances.”

“Some very foolish officials, Democrats and Republicans alike, are pushing drugs so that you won’t notice that you’re boiling, or freezing, or starving to death, or have just lost your job and your children have just undergone their third or fourth sex change operation.”

“We need to give especially our youth a positive vision of the future. Then, they won’t collapse into a need for drugs and video games, merely killing time as they wait for their short lives to be over.”

that was the case with the Peace of Westphalia. This was a 150-year religious war in Europe, ground by the Thirty Years’ War, in which the warring parties realized, if they would continue this religious war, nobody would be left to enjoy the victory. Already one-third of most of the villages of Europe had been destroyed, the people, the animals, everything was destroyed; and it was clear any more war would lead to the death of everybody.

Now, we are today in a similar situation: If we do not change our ways, World War III is an acute possibility: Look at all the people who are warning of it. Even such not so nice people like (former Secretary of State) Henry Kissinger, or Professor Mearsheimer, or I could make a very long list of people; there are many appeals saying, “governments please change policy, we are on the road to World War III.” (former Congresswoman) Tulsi Gabbard is making many statements in this direction.

We are in danger, and how do you solve this? Well, you have to make a new international security architecture, which eliminates the danger of a world war, because that would be the extinction of the human species. It is actually very easy: You have to make a security architecture, which takes into account the interest of every single nation on the planet—of the United States, of Europe, of Russia, of China, Iran, Venezuela, Cuba, and the list can go on until you have all the countries named.

Why should all these countries agree to a security order? There is an urgent need to solve the fact that the world is plunging into a big depression, a depression which threatens to be much, much worse than that of the ’30s, so what we need is to do measures like Franklin D. Roosevelt did in 1933: We have to have an elimination of the speculation. This can be done through a global Glass-Steagall separation of the banks; you have to get rid of the speculative junk, the derivatives and everything which goes along with it; then you have to put the commercial banks under state protection so that business, agriculture, trade can function; and you have to give the power of credit generation back to the sovereign governments, and you do that by establishing a National Bank in every country, in the tradition of Alexander Hamilton. Many countries are doing that already, like China; Russia is moving rapidly in this direction; the Eurasian Economic Union; other countries are moving in this direction.

If that would be done in every country, every country takes sovereign control of its own credit generation, and devotes the issuing of that credit entirely to the common good of its people, and invests in the goods which are necessary, basic infrastructure. Look at the condition of infrastructure in the United States or in Europe: Bridges collapse; potholes so big that entire trucks disappear in them! You have a horrible condition of infrastructure, so you must invest and make a new system, invest in a fast train system in Europe and the United States; you could build maglev trains. You could connect all major cities through fast trains. This would create many hundreds of thousands of jobs, it would make transport so much better. Then you go into the upgrading of agriculture: You must have enough food and food security in every country, but you must feed the world population.

Then you have to move to the next higher level of productivity: You invest in a crash program for fusion power, which is in reach, or there are many startup companies which see that, and they want to get bigtime into the investment in fusion power, because they know this is the energy source of the future. And once we have that, we have not only energy security, but we also have raw materials security because you can produce new raw materials from garbage.

Then we need to have international cooperation in space research: international Moon villages, a city on Mars. With fusion power as propulsion, you can envision that in a couple of generations we can have interstellar space travel. The human species is not an earthling species: We are a species of the universe, and the beautiful pictures coming back from the James Webb Space Telescope open a whole new horizon of where we are with our little planet in the universe. So there are so many exciting things to discover!

All of that can be done, and I think what is needed is that the people of good will, all the people who were mentioned by Diane, the farmers, the truckers, the taxi drivers, the engineers, the construction workers, the doctors and nurses, all the people who are decent people trying to do the good, we should unite. And we should force the governments to change course, stop geopolitics, work together, and build a world which is worthy of the dignity of man.

I’m quite optimistic. We are going into an {incredible} crisis—that’s not why I’m optimistic—but as the Chinese character for “crisis” shows, it’s the same character for “chance,” this coming convulsion is the chance to change the system for the better. In America, that means going back to the principles and ideals of the Founding Fathers, of President Lincoln, of Franklin Roosevelt, President Kennedy. In Europe it means going back to the great cultural high points, the Italian Renaissance, the period of the Polytechnique in France, the German Classical period, the ideas of Friedrich Schiller, of the music of Beethoven and many others: We have all the wealth, we just have to change our ways and remind ourselves of the best traditions we as a human species have produced.

So I think if we work together, and I’m calling on you, don’t sit on the fence in this historical moment: Help the Schiller Institute to build a better world, and I think we can do it.

SPEED: Thank you very much, Helga.

Diane, I’m going to ask that you say something to us, sort of as a close for the American audience. Why should we be hopeful that the American people can respond to what Helga just had to say?

SARE: Well, one reason is that I managed to get on the ballot, when no other independent statewide candidate running in the State of New York could, and that is, as people may know, with the outrageously difficult signature requirement of 45,000 signatures of registered voters over six weeks; at least three other minor parties tried to get on the ballot and failed.

I was the only one: And I think the reason for that is exactly because people are searching for more profound ideas.

I also would underscore what Helga just said about the collapse of the West, the United States in particular. The food hyperinflation, energy hyperinflation. Since we were petitioning, very often outside grocery stores, we met so many people who were in a state of shock and distraught about the food they could no longer afford to purchase: I met one person who said, “I have to take care of my elderly mother, my disabled daughter. I just spent $148 and I haven’t even bought any meat!” There’s also that kind of shock and frustration, and I think that makes it more important that what we’re presenting to people is big ideas. They lack trust, they’ve been told so many times, “just do this,” “oh you just have to do this,” “it’s just this little thing.” Well, I think it’s dawning on people, it’s not “just this little thing,” that the only way we are not only going to survive the crisis but actually move into a new paradigm, where mankind conducts itself on a much higher level and relations among people and nations are much more appropriate for the dignity of the human race, that they’re going to have to begin to also consider more profound ideas. And I see that reflected in the response I’m getting around the state, both the hardship, the desperation, but also the hunger for beautiful and profound ideas.

So I think it’s definitely hopeful. I feel we really are in a kind of a race against time, as Helga said. She said, “I’m optimistic,” and then described the crash: Of course, we’re not optimistic about the crash, but the only way you would get such a major shift is, it must become obvious that any other way is total doom. So, the main question for people, on why they should join the Schiller Institute and mobilize themselves immediately, is can we attain the changes we need in time?

SPEED: OK. Diane Sare, Helga Zepp-LaRouche, thank you for being with us today in this special report.

Sare Supports Fight to Preserve El Maestro Center

LaRouche independent U.S. Senate candidate Diane Sare stands with Mr. Fernando Ponce and his wife at El Maestro Cultural and Educational Center in the Bronx (date). The center, which has a regulation size boxing ring and trains professional and amateur fighters, including several champions, has been a pillar of support for hundreds of young people to learn physical and mental fitness skills, including GED tutoring for those who dropped out of high school. The owners of the building housing the Center have put it up for sale, which means that this wonderful community resource, the life work of Mr. Ponce, would be lost. The members are working around the clock to raise over $1 million to purchase the building so that the program can expand and continue. It’s a 501(c)(3) organization and donations are being accepted through PayPal.me/Elmaestrobox. “I urge everyone who cares about young people in this community to join the fight to preserve El Maestro and the excellent work of Mr. Ponce,” said Sare.” This is not a partisan matter, but one in the best traditions of this community, Bronx and the City.”
