@rcmpgrcpolice @OttawaPolice but what about their overtime hours and their excitement to beat peaceful protestors? You do realize the handful of screenshots on tweeter are nothing compared to what's being shared elsewhere, right #RCMP? Wait until you see the videos.

PROACTIVELY TO COMMUNITY PARTNERS

Dear Community Partner,

We are hearing from some community partners about negative comments they are receiving following recent social media posts.

On Friday February 18th, during the demonstrations in Ottawa, there was an interaction between a Toronto Police Officer on a horse and a woman.

In an unrelated incident, screen shots containing images, text and participant details of an online chat forum used by some RCMP Musical Ride members emerged on social media.

Negative comments are being posted on social media linking the two events.

With respect to the incident involving a Toronto Police Officer on a horse, the Ontario Special Investigations Unit is investigating and we will await their findings.

We are aware of the material circulating on social media pertaining to some of our members, and we can confirm that we are looking into the matter. This material is not representative of the vast majority who have committed themselves to serving Canadians with integrity and professionalism. Public trust is essential for the RCMP to effectively fulfill its mandate. RCMP employees are expected to conduct themselves in a manner that meets the rightfully high expectations of Canadians. Both on and off-duty, members are required to behave in accordance with the Code of Conduct of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

REACTIVE RESPONSE

Good morning,

Here are the Communications and media highlights as of 8 a.m.

- The Prime Minister will deliver remarks and hold a media availability at 11:00am. The event will also be attended by: Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance Chrystia Freeland, Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada David Lametti, Minister of Public Safety Marco Mendicino and Minister of Emergency Preparedness Bill Blair.
- The House of Commons will vote on the Emergency Act at 8:00pm tonight. It's being reported that it will likely pass with the joint support of the Liberals and NDP, while the Bloc Québécois and the Conservative parties are against it.
- The Coventry Road location previously occupied by an unlawful assembly is now clear. 20 vehicles were towed and a police presence will remain in place to prevent anyone from returning. (QPS Tweet)
- Leaked Musical Ride screenshots continue to be shared and retweeted on social media. (see screenshot below)
- There have been no media requests so far today.

Next update to come around 11:30am (EST).

MPs to vote tonight on decision to invoke Emergencies Act

MPs will vote on the motion Monday at 8 p.m. ET, and it is expected to pass with the joint support of the Liberals and NDP. The Bloc Québécois and the Conservatives are against it. If the motion fails, the act and all the extraordinary powers stemming from it will be torn up. If it passes they will remain in place until mid-March at the latest.

Streets are quiet, but city is far from normal

The 24 days of protests that had turned the nation's capital into a tense battleground tapered off quickly on Sunday, with trucks and demonstrators clearing out and cleanup crews moving in. But the city's interim police chief, Steve Bell, warned that a return to normal is still a long way off. Police checkpoints remained in place as law enforcement agencies moved to the next phase of their operation.
